

Abstract

During discussions with social workers in the field, we, teachers in university college, were able to note that social action professionals were willing to discuss their practices in the current context of societal changes.

Through this article, we wish to share a practice linking the world of education to professional environments. Our intention, as researchers also trained in the analysis of practices, was to try to take a closer look at the actions of social workers and, to this end, we have devised a very specific methodology.

This research resulted in the publication of a book presenting both the context and the issues in which social work develops, the research methodology used and the results thereof. This book, published in 2020, is still used today to support the realization of supervisions.
